

Erika Siegrist MS, RN is a consultant specializing in research and clinical trials. She began her career as an oncology nurse at the NIH and has since led the expansion of research programs in both community and academic settings. Her expertise includes business development, centralized clinical trial services, and site networks. She is motivated to deliver high quality research that improves outcomes and expands treatment outcomes available to patients and clinicians. Erika provides consulting services to healthcare organizations, academic medical centers, and industry partners. She also advises investors and sites on clinical trial technology solutions.